

Hyalite

Date

Mon, 01/04/2021 - 18:44

Today climbing up at the Nutcracker we observed extensive scouring occurring in the gullies below the climb. Strong up and downslope winds were pushing snow around, and it wouldn't surprise me to see drifts in strange places. We were able to get a good look at the terrain in the alpine above Twin and near the Maid, lots of wind transport occurring but no natural avalanches visible.

Observer Name

Sam H